

Velvet Dub

A movie palace in your living room.

BRAND GUIDELINES · MOVIE-THEATRE EDITION

Version 4 · October 2026

A night at the pictures, at home

Velvet Dub lets families upload a film or episode and get it back dubbed by AI, subtitled the way they read, with nudity, swearing and violence muted, blurred or skipped live as they watch.

The brand borrows from the grand old cinema: velvet seats and drapes, brass marquee bulbs, Art Deco lettering, paper tickets, and the darkness just before the film starts. It should feel like a night out at a beautiful theatre, not a costume party. Elegant materials, used with restraint, around a screen that stays the star.

1 The velvet frames; the film performs.

Drapes, valances and seats sit at the edges. The picture, subtitles and controls in the middle stay clean.

2 Classic, not costume.

Real-looking velvet with soft folds, fine gold trim, generous darkness. No cartoon curtains, popcorn, reels or clapperboards.

3 Two reds, two jobs.

Velvet is the house: buttons, sidebar, featured ticket. Signal red is brighter and means a filter is acting. Never swap them.

4 Brass is jewelry.

Brass and gilt appear as thin lines, bulbs and small labels. Never a fill, never a button.

5 Plain words, a little showmanship.

Plain sentences everywhere; theatre words only in headings and names.

6 Nothing is hidden.

Every cut is shown before the curtain goes up and can be undone.

02 · VOICE AND COPY

Plain words, a little showmanship

Instructions, errors and settings are plain and specific. Theatre vocabulary seasons headings, section names and plan names, never anything a person has to act on. Use “you” and “your family.” Avoid “users,” “content,” “seamless,” “unlock,” “AI-powered.”

Names. Plans are named like showings — Matinee (free), Family, Premiere, Schools. Landing features are “Row A / B / C.” Categories stay plain: swearing, nudity, sexual content, violence, drugs and drinking, scary scenes. Times are runtime timestamps (41:18) in tabular numbers; missing facts stay as visible placeholders like [PRICE].

The house lights are down

Dark only. The auditorium tones carry every page; ivory carries the words. Dark swatches are outlined so they can be told apart here.

ground #0F0B0B
Page and app background, the dark of the auditorium. The product is dark-only.

stage-black #070505
Behind the screen on the stage and in the player, a step darker than ground.

surface-deep #140D0D
Inside the marquee sign, the upload zone and the filter-timeline panel.

panel #1A1312
Input fills and a selected list row.

raised #26191A
Removable language chips; timeline tracks use a shade between panel and raised (#221817).

line #3A2A2A
Hairline rules between rows and sections. Decorative, not a control border.

border-control #4D3838
Borders of inputs, selects, segmented controls and small secondary buttons.

border-strong #5A4444
Outlined secondary buttons.

ink #F3ECE4
Ivory. Primary text and icons on dark grounds (16:1 on ground) and on velvet (7.8:1). Also ticket paper.

ink-soft #DCCFC4
Long paragraphs and supporting copy on ground.

muted #B3A398
Labels, metadata, timestamps (7.8:1 on ground).

faint #93847B
Off states and axis ticks (5.3:1 on ground). Lowest grey allowed for text.

03 · COLOR

Velvet, signal and brass

Velvet is the brand red, used at full value on primary buttons and the featured ticket; drapes are built from its five shades. Signal appears only where a filter acts. Brass and gilt are lines and dots, never fills.

velvet #9B1B24

The brand red, the color of theatre seats. Primary buttons (with ink text), the selected preset, the featured ticket, red top rules on panels.

velvet-deep #5E0F15

Fold shadows in drapes, the back row of seats, the sidebar's darker edge.

velvet-mid #8A1820

Body of drape folds, swags and the front row of seats.

velvet-sheen #B8383F

The single soft highlight running down a drape. Never a flat fill.

velvet-shadow #2E070B

Darkest drape fold and the valance pelmet board.

on-velvet #F0D9D2

Inactive nav and labels on the velvet sidebar (10:1).

signal #E5484F

Bright filter red: timeline and seek-bar marks, 'Skipped 42 s', the Filters heading, processing progress. Means a filter is acting; never decoration (5.1:1 on ground).

brass #D9A441

Marquee bulbs, small uppercase labels and step lines, speaker names, the poster frame (8.7:1 on ground).

gilt #C99A3E

Trim only: valance braid, pelmet lines, tie-back cords, the double rule under the wordmark.

fringe #B88A34

Valance fringe and tie-back tassels.

ticket-ink #1A1010

Text and buttons printed on ivory ticket stock.

ticket-red #7A1520

The 'Admit' line printed on ivory tickets (8:1 on ink).

Art Deco headlines, plain text

NOW SHOWING IN YOUR LIVING ROOM

Marquee label. Archivo Bold at 75% width, uppercase, 0.18em spacing, in brass. For kickers, step lines (“Harbor Lights · step 2 of 5”) and the “Admit” line on tickets. At most one per block.

Load from Google Fonts: Limelight; Archivo (wdth 62–125, wght 400–800).

Drapes and valance

Uneven folds

Fold widths vary. Shade smoothly from velvet-shadow through velvet-mid and velvet, with one narrow velvet-sheen highlight.

Lit from the stage

A soft shadow darkens the top, under the valance, and the bottom, toward the floor.

Drawn back

The inner edge curves in to a gilt tie-back cord with a small fringe tassel about 60% down, then flares to the floor. Mirror the right curtain from the left.

The valance

A velvet-shadow pelmet with a fine gilt line above and a heavier one below. Soft festoon swags hang beneath, each with two fold lines, a faint sheen, gilt braid and a fine fringe. Gilt-edged tails hang at both ends.

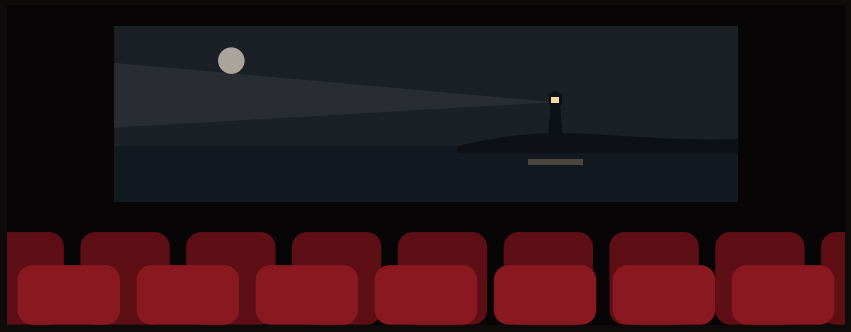

Never — Hard stripes, evenly repeating folds, flat red, or a row of scallops. Drapes and valances are decorative: hide them from screen readers.

Marquee, seats, tickets, sidebar

NOW SHOWING

Watch it in Spanish.
Skip what you'd rather not.

Marquee. A dotted brass bulb border around the hero sign, on the landing page only, with a marquee label above the headline. Once per page.

Seats. Two staggered rows of seat backs, velvet-deep behind and velvet-mid in front, under the landing stage only, as if you're looking past them at the screen.

Velvet sidebar. Smooth velvet with a soft sheen, no stripes. Limelight wordmark over a gilt double rule; nav in on-velvet; the current page on a darker inset.

Built for the screen

Landing: marquee sign, the full-width stage, “Same film, your cut,” Rows A–C, tickets, velvet-ruled footer. App: velvet sidebar; a brass step line, a Limelight screen title, then sections split by hairlines. Player: title bar above the stage, valance over the screen, curtains at the sides, controls below a velvet rule. Corners are square except controls (2 px).

Listen

Buttons. Primary: velvet fill, ivory text, one per screen. Secondary: border-strong outline. Text actions: underlined ivory.

Translation

Natural, the way people talk

Kids (G) | Family (PG) | Teen

Inputs and segmented controls. Panel fill, border-control edge, label above in muted. The chosen option fills velvet.

Filter timeline. Labeled lanes; each filtered moment is a signal block sized to its length.

Skipped 42 s of violence

What happened?

Skip notice. “Skipped 42 s” in signal, then the category, then two text actions.

Keep the lamp lit until morning.

Mantén la lámpara encendida hasta la mañana.

Subtitles. Ivory with a soft shadow; the second language in subtitle-second. Filtered words become *****.

The marquee monogram

“VD” in Limelight, ivory, in a velvet square framed by a ring of brass marquee bulbs: the sign over the theatre door, in miniature.

PRIMARY LOCKUP

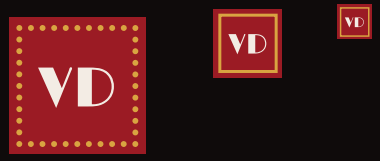

MARQUEE LOCKUP · HERO ONLY

SMALL SIZES

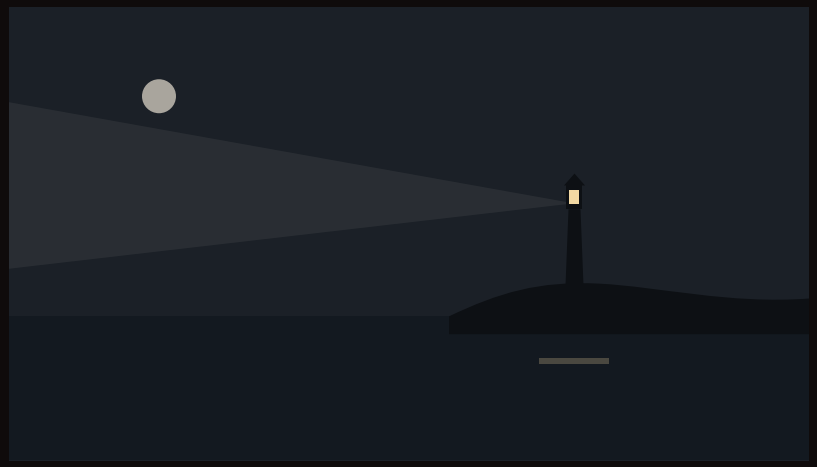

64 px bulbs · 32 / 16 px solid brass line

Use. Primary lockup: mark then wordmark, gap a quarter of the mark’s width. Marquee lockup on the landing hero and title cards only. Mark alone for the app icon, favicon, sidebar and avatars. Clear space: the height of the V around the lockup.

Never

Put it in a circle, rotate or skew it, change the bulb spacing, round the corners, add shadows or glows, recolor the letters, or set “VD” in another face.

The supporting cast

Imagery. Until real frames exist, use the flat illustrated harbor scene: night sky, sea, cliff, lighthouse with a lit lamp. No people, no gradients inside the scene. No stock photos, popcorn, reels or clapperboards.

Iconography

Few icons; words first. Inline 2 px stroke icons at 18–22 px in ivory: back, play, pause, rewind 10 s, full screen. Icon-only buttons get an accessible label and a 44 px hit area. No emoji.

The name

Velvet Dub

Velvet for the theatre seats and drapes, and for something smooth and clean; dub for what the product does. Two words, title case. The wordmark is Limelight, ivory on dark, ticket-ink on ivory, never stretched or outlined. The mark is the marquee monogram (previous page).

Accessibility

All text meets 4.5:1 on its ground (ratios are in the color notes); faint is the lowest text grey. Touch targets are at least 44 px. Filters are labeled, never told apart by color alone. Drapes, valances and seats are decorative and hidden from screen readers.

09 · DON'T

What breaks the spell

- ✕ Hard-striped or evenly repeating curtains, scalloped valances, flat cartoon red.
- ✕ Brass or gilt as a fill or a button; any third accent color.
- ✕ Bold, all-caps or letter-spaced Limelight.
- ✕ Marquee bulbs, seats or tickets outside their one place.
- ✕ Popcorn, film reels, clapperboards, spotlights, film-strip borders.
- ✕ Velvet for filter marks, or signal red for buttons.
- ✕ Theatre puns in instructions, errors or settings.
- ✕ Rounded cards, pill buttons, drop shadows, gradient washes, emoji.
